

Album first step to take on world

CLASSICALLY-TRAINED Paddington chanteuse and pianist Alana Scott will launch her debut solo album Un Palette de Chant at a private event at the Emporium on June 10.

The Queensland Conservatorium graduate said the album featured a variety of styles including French and German art songs, operatic arias, musical theatre and jazz as well as her own piano compositions.

"There's really a bit of everything but they all mesh nicely together to create an easy-listening album.

"Piano-orientated film music is something I have always been interested in and I'm just starting now to experiment with it more seriously."

Scott said she planned to use the album as a tool to undertake further singing training in New York.

"My goal in the next year is to have some singing lessons in opera and musical theatre in New York," she said.

"I'm going there in August to check things out and see some Broadway shows."

Scott said Un Palette de Chant also featured fellow Conservatorium graduate Crystal Luge as accompanist.

"The connection between singer and accompanist is really important so we have been working together for a while to create a very fluid sound."
